REPORT READING GUIDE

01 / Your question and information

This guide uses a fictional question to explain the report format. It contains no birth details, calculated chart, or personal BaZi conclusions, and is not a client case. Your personal report is based on the agreed scope and actual analysis; no fixed page count is promised.

Begin with a focused question

A clear question gives the analysis a focus. The report records what you want to understand, the background you choose to share, and the scope agreed before payment.

> FICTIONAL QUESTION - FORMAT EXAMPLE
>
> I am considering a different role. What should I examine before deciding?

Define the scope

For a question like this, the report would identify the relevant chart structures, explain the traditional interpretation, and offer practical suggestions in light of the circumstances you described. It would not promise a job offer, a particular outcome, or an exact event date.

Confirm the information first

A personal report records the birth year, month, day, calendar used, city and country of birth, and birth time, noting whether the time is exact, estimated, or unknown. The calendar and time conventions used, along with any unresolved uncertainty, are explained before interpretation.

This guide has no personal birth information and therefore contains no calculated chart. An unknown birth time must be discussed as a limitation; it must not be replaced with a guess.

REPORT READING GUIDE

02 / Understanding the reasoning

Show how the interpretation was reached

A personal report explains which chart structures are relevant to the question and how they support the interpretation. Classical terms are explained in plain language. Conclusions need reasons and must not be presented as guaranteed results.

The method used

The launch service uses classical Zi Ping BaZi. The report identifies the relevant relationships within the four pillars and the seasonal context used in the analysis. It does not add unrelated systems to make a conclusion appear stronger.

Keep three kinds of information distinct

Information you provide

Your account of the situation, including details that may still need checking. We distinguish what you tell us from information that has been independently verified.

Traditional interpretation

A reading based on the stated chart and classical method, with its reasoning and uncertainty explained. It is not proof that an event will occur.

Practical suggestions

Questions and possible next steps related to your circumstances. Consider them alongside actual evidence, your responsibilities, and any relevant professional advice.

REPORT READING GUIDE

03 / Practical suggestions

The report relates the traditional interpretation to your question and offers practical suggestions. It explains the reasons for those suggestions and what still needs checking. The final decision is yours.

An example using the fictional question

For the role-change question, the following are practical prompts only. They are not findings from a BaZi chart, and they do not recommend accepting or rejecting a role.

Clarify the work

Compare the actual responsibilities, working hours, reporting arrangements, and support available in each role.

Identify what you do not know

Separate written information from expectations. Ask which assumptions you could check with the employer or people familiar with the work.

Consider a practical next step

Before making a commitment, consider what a conversation, written clarification, or further check could help you understand about the role.

Make the limits visible

Traditional interpretation is distinct from established fact. Uncertain birth information can limit the analysis. The report should identify those limits and avoid presenting a possible outcome as inevitable. Medical, legal, financial, and other regulated matters need appropriate professional advice.

REPORT READING GUIDE

04 / Delivery and follow-up

Know when delivery begins

Your PDF report will be delivered within 24 hours after your consultation is accepted, payment is completed, and all required information has been received.

Once all three conditions are met, we confirm the start time and delivery deadline in writing. Submitting a request or creating an order alone does not start the 24-hour period. Missing or conflicting information is discussed with you first.

Using your follow-up

After PDF delivery, Focused includes one 30-minute follow-up and Comprehensive includes one 60-minute follow-up. The session explains the report, its reasoning, and related practical suggestions. Additional charts, new consultation topics, and a rewritten report are not included.

Questions you could bring

1. Which part of the interpretation depends on the birth time or another assumption?

2. What is the traditional reasoning behind this conclusion?

3. Which suggestions depend on facts I still need to check?

Scheduling instructions are provided privately under the arrangements agreed before payment.

Before you decide to pay

Start with a basic application. If Adrian accepts your request, he confirms the scope, fee, terms, how to submit information privately, and follow-up arrangements with you before payment. Applying does not reserve an appointment; payment alone does not confirm the service.

OrientFate offers human-led consultation using traditional Chinese metaphysical frameworks. Interpretations and practical suggestions are intended for personal reflection and consideration; outcomes are not guaranteed. They do not replace medical, legal, financial, or other regulated professional advice.